

Information on Bonsai

Bonsai trees generally need to be outdoors unless they are tropical trees. They're trees or shrubs, not houseplants. Many of the trees in this display are either native to our area or can survive a winter here outside with some protection from freezing and the wind. Trees in our area require a period of dormancy during the winter to rest from the season of growth and to prepare for the next season of growth. Without dormancy a tree native to our area will die. In addition, trees require sunlight and fresh air during their growing season. It is difficult to reproduce indoors either the level of light the sun provides or the quantity of fresh air that a tree needs to grow. Some tropical and sub-tropical species which require a warmer climate can do well indoors if provided with enough light. Even these trees do best when they are placed outside during the summer.

If you're interested in starting to grow bonsai, realize that this is a hobby which requires daily attention. Approach this decision as if you were deciding to get a pet. With neglect it is easy to kill a tree. To find a ready-made bonsai, several routes are possible. It is NOT a good idea to buy a ready-made bonsai at a large chain store. These trees are not kept in ideal conditions and usually die after some time. DON'T buy a bonsai over E-Bay. There are a lot of hucksters ready to overcharge for a stick in a pot. Spend a little extra money and find a good tree at a reputable bonsai nursery or garden center. Many nurseries also offer classes and workshops for all levels of bonsai enthusiast.

Bonsai trees need more attention than being simply watered. They require regular attention to maintain their shape. Wiring, pinching new growth, regular fertilizing, and re-potting and root pruning every couple of years are all necessary. This art takes a lot of patience, but if you enjoy bonsai you will develop patience.

THE BEST WAY to get start learning the Art of Bonsai is by joining your local Club:

Bonsai Society of Greater Springfield Web Site is www.springfieldbonsai.com and E-Mail is Springfieldbonsai@Hotmail.com

Club Meeting Location

The B.S.G.S. meeting are held at various locations, please join e-mail list to get meeting announcements. We meet on the third Tuesday of the month at 7:00 visit see web site for meeting schedule.

Another option is to do some reading and style your own bonsai from a tree you've bought at a nursery. Many species are adaptable, among the most adaptable being junipers. Before you do this, be sure it is the right time of year (in our area, mid-April through mid- May) and be sure you've done a lot of reading. Also take into consideration whether you want the plant to be indoors during the winter. It is actually a good idea to have more than one so that you don't kill your only bonsai with over-attention.

A third option is to collect a tree from the wild. Any tree collected in New England is a strictly outdoors tree year-round except for an occasional day or two indoors for display. Collecting trees must be done properly and with permission. If not collected in the proper way and at the right time of year a tree will die. Do not attempt collecting a tree for bonsai without first consulting with someone who has experience.

Proper winter storage of bonsai is crucial to their survival. Be sure to read up on this before winter comes. Don't wait to the last minute!

There are many good books on bonsai. Some good bonsai books to read are:

Nick Lenz (local Bonsai Artist) Bonsai from the Wild	John Naka Bonsai Techniques I &amp; II
Sunset, Bonsai	Colin Lewis Bonsai Design
Herb Gustafson The Bonsai Workshop	Harry Tomlinson The Complete Book of Bonsai

The Internet also has a wealth of information on bonsai. Take a look at these web sites:

Bonsai Clubs International (species care articles)	www.bonsai-bci.com
World Bonsai Friendship Foundation:	www.bonsai-wbff.org
The National Bonsai Foundation	www.bonsai-nbf.org
American Bonsai Society (bonsai care articles)	www.absbonsai.org
Bonsai at the National Arboretum	www.usna.usda.gov
MidAtlantic Bonsai Societies	www.MidAtlanticBonsai.freeservers.com
Bonsai Nut (great Friendly Forums)	www.bonsainut.com
Internet Bonsai Club: (great forums & FAQ)	www.ibonsaiclub.forumotion.com

Most garden centers will have a variety of species which are good for first-time bonsai enthusiasts. This is a partial list, although not exclusive:

- Larix 'laricina' (American Larch)
- Juniperus procumbens 'Nana' (Japanese Garden Juniper or Green Mound Juniper)
- Juniperus chinensis 'Parsoni' (Parson's or Prostrate Juniper) most other juniper varieties are good also
- Ulmus parvifolia (Chinese Elm)
- Picea abies 'Nidiformis' (Bird's Nest Spruce)
- Pinus mugho 'Mugho' (Mountain Pine')
- Pinus sylvestris (Scott's Pine)

For tropical trees, a good starter plant is any variety of Ficus. A couple of good ones are 'Ficus Too Little' or the Willow leafed Ficus, because of their small leaves. Dwarf umbrella plant or dwarf Jade can also be made into nice tropical bonsai

Try these local nurseries for your bonsai needs:

New England Bonsai Gardens 914 S. Main St. (Rte. 126) Bellingham, MA 02019 (508) 883-2842 www.nebonsai.com	Sanctuary Bonsai 237 Burnham St. East Hartford, CT 06108 Todd Hansen (860) 282-1081 www.SanctuaryBonsai.com
Bonsai West 100 Great Road Littleton, Massachusetts tel. 978-486-3556 www.bonsaiwest.com	PFM Bonsai Studio 7 Western Avenue (off Route 147) West Charlton, NY 12010 www.pfmbonsai.com
Sixteen Acres Garden Center 1359 Wilbraham Rd. Springfield, MA 01119 Phone 783-5883 www.sixteenacresgardencenter.com small selection of bonsai tools & supplies	Bonsai Shoppe 127 West Main Street Plainville, CT 06062 Al Gudat (203) 879-9643 Small retail Bonsai shop with bonsai supplies & tools

Patience is the most important quality one must have to practice the art of bonsai. It can take years to cultivate a well-formed bonsai tree. If you have the patience, or need to learn patience and are ready to do so, this art is for you.

Written by, Craig Cowing and edited for use by B.S.G.S., 2003